WORSE THAN WAR

BOILER EXPLOSION IN LONDON BARRACKS

Two Soldiers Killed and Two Others Were Brightly Scalded.

(Bulletin Special Dispatch).

London, Ont., Dec. 27.—Two of the hot water furnaces at Wolseley barracks exploded this morning, causing the instant death of the mess sergeant, fatally injuring Thomas Warwick, and very seriously injuring Private Walter Warwick, and Quartermaster-Sergeant Dunlevy. A plumber had been engaged repairing the furnaces an hour before, and the four men were in the furnace room examining the furnace when the explosion occurred. All were frightened severely.

BLACK EYE FOR ROSS

Conservative Wins in North Renfrew by a Very Large Majority.

(Bulletin Special Dispatch).

Ottawa, Dec. 27.—Latest returns from North Renfrew, Ont., where Dunlop, Conservative, was elected to the Ontario Legislature on Saturday, give him 700 majority. The personal popularity of Dunlop and the fact that the lumbermen sided with the Conservatives are said to be the causes of this large majority. At the general election the Liberals carried the seat by five hundred majority.

A WEDDING

The home of Richard Ottewell, of Clover Bar, was the scene of a pleasant event on December 27th, Christmas Eve. It was the occasion of the marriage of his youngest daughter, Alice May, to Mr. Mark Latam, of East Clover Bar. The wedding was performed by the Methodist minister, Mr. E. Finlay, of Clover Bar.

The bride was given away by her uncle, Mr. Philip Ottewell, and was prettily attired in a dress of pale blue silk with a sprig of carnation of the groom, attired as best man, while Miss Annie Ottewell, his only daughter, was maid of honor.

The occasion also the 75th anniversary of Mr. Richard Ottewell's birthday. The bride received many useful and beautiful presents and the young couple are followed by a host of friends for a successful career in life.

CASHEL ARRESTED IN EDMONTON

A story is going the rounds of an exciting rehearsal of Cashel's hoped for arrest, which took place at a feed barn in Edmonton a week ago Saturday. The arrest was carried out most successfully. The particulars are given as follows:—

On Saturday evening a man drove up to the feed barn with his horses reeking wet. He was in a hurry. Wanted his horses fed at once and then hitched up again. Would not give his name. Went into the office and lay down, drawing his steigh robe over his head. The stable keeper was wide awake, however, and putting the man's peculiar conduct along with visions of the thousand dollar reward advertised by the N.W.M.P., telephoned for the town police. The chief soon arrived and viewed the now sleeping arrival through the window. Then he called on the Mounted Police for reinforcements. Numerous photographs of Cashel were produced and compared with the watched one. Two of the mounted force who had seen Cashel in Calgary, were taken into the consultation, and the verdict was that the right man was located. A grand advance was then made, and the handcuffs triumphantly placed on the wily Cashel. But the triumph was of short duration. "Cashel" stated that he wanted to go home, and after a few reliable citizens had identified him as a respectable farmer of Clover Bar, he was allowed to do so.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE
It is the custom in Ontario for the employer to give at Christmas a tur- ket to each of the employees. The W. H. Clark Company outdid this custom by giving to one and all in their employ a check for three dollars, wishing them many happy returns of the season.

This is as it should be, a fellow feeling existing between the em- ployer and employee.

METHODIST CHURCH

At the Methodist church on Sunday morning, Rev. C. H. Huestis in his regular five minute talk to the children, dwelt on the characteristics of a great nation and urged the boys and girls to prepare themselves for filling their place in this Canada of ours. The four elements of a great nation given were: 1. Freedom; 2. Union; 3. Righteousness and 4. Religion. The regular sermon had for its subject, "The Bulwarks of Christianity." Three of these are: 1. Christian experience; 2. The impregnable rock of the Holy Scriptures, and 3. The character and life of Jesus. At the evening service the sermon was based on Phil. 3: 13-14; "This one thing I do, etc." People should not look to the past, but press onward to a fixed goal with earnestness of purpose. We should not be discouraged by the failures, nor unduly elated by the successes of the past. We should live in the present for the future. The theme was a very suitable one for the closing service of the year. At both services the choir of the church rendered special Christmas music. The choir of the church under the able leadership of Mrs. F. S. Green, has greatly improved during the past few months, and the music is one of the interesting features of all the church services. At the close of the evening service the usual, social half hour in the lecture room was much enjoyed by a large number of the young people.

THE PLAY

Although the second night of the Harold Nelson company was Saturday and therefore the most busy of the week, Robertson hall was again filled to see "A Set of Turquoises" and "The Taming of the Shrew".

The latter being Shakespearean was of course the main piece, and as it depicts a lovely woman in a decidedly unlovely light, no doubt "A Set of Turquoises" was put on to balance by showing to the lords of creation as in a mirror, one of their many weaknesses, that is, jealousy.

In "A Set of Turquoises" Mr. Nelson and Miss Stuart took the parts of the Count and Countess of Lora respectively, and they, with Miss Editha Jowett as "Miriam", the maid and page, were the whole play and took their several parts to the life. The Countess was charming and desired to add to her charms a set of turquoise. The Count was fiercely in love, but of somewhat thrifty mind and declined to invest. The Countess doubts his love and he protests. She wagers kisses against turquoise that she will make him jealous without cause. Miriam appears disguised as a page and by a clever tale inflames his jealousy to the point of murder. The climax is the disclosure of the supposed page's identity and the confession of the Count to his infirmity of disposition. The finish of the play is the conquest of man by woman, which is scarcely rare enough in real life to make a really thrilling climax.

In "The Taming of the Shrew" Miss Helene Scott took the part of the lovely but vile tempered "Katherina," and Mr. Nelson that of "Petrucio," the husband who tames his shrewish wife by showing a temper worse than her own. Both were fully up to the mark. Miss Stuart as Bianca, the sweet sister of the foregoer Katharina; Miss Jowett, as Bianca's husband to be, and Bryce Demond, as the Father of Katharina, took the second leading parts most acceptably. A marked feature of Mr. Nelson's company is the excellence of the support and this was fully in evidence throughout. Of the play itself, although a comedy, it is unlovely in idea and boisterous in action; but the odd situations, witty sayings and clever acting brought out rounds of laughing applause.

The moral of the play—if it can be called a moral—is that a shrew, may be tamed by a brute. But it's altogether questionable whether it were not better that the wife should remain a shrew than that the husband should even play the brute; because if he assumes the character it is apt to grow on him; and a brutal husband is an even greater offense against nature than a shrewish wife. By the way, it is a fact to apply the name brute to an abusive husband, because among the lower animals the males are always considerate of the females.

The play to-night is Bulwer Lytton's "Richelieu." It is one of Mr. Nelson's best. The costuming and scenery are new and elaborate.

The hall has been rewired to meet the demands of Mr. Nelson's productions, so that special lighting may be used.

Tomorrow night "Quo Vadis" will be repeated by special request, with some new effects, which the new lighting of the hall will make possible. This will be the last opportunity to see "Quo Vadis," as on Thursday morning the company go direct to Calgary.

Alex Taylor, Dr. Wilson, and E. Rayner left this morning on a trip to the Kootenay and other points in British Columbia.
